AL BLOZIS

THIS last day of the professional football season at the Polo Grounds is dedicated by the Giants to two of their team mates who lost their lives in the war,—Al Blozis, who died in the Vosges Mountains, and Jack Lummus, who was killed on Iwo Jima.

Al and Jack were splendid men. That they also were grand fellows and fine football players now, alas, is only incidental. The Giants miss them. They miss their fellowship, they miss the tone these men lent to the clubhouse and field ensemble.

Today plaques commemorating their deeds are unveiled here at the Polo Grounds.

Blozis joined the Giants in 1942 after winning fame in football and as the world's champion shot putter at Georgetown. Big Al (he weighed 250 and stood 6:6) did well in his freshman year with the pros. In his second he won all-league tackle honors.

After the 1943 gridiron campaign the North Bergen, N. J. giant got into the Army the hard way. He had been turned down several times because of his size. After winning his gold bars, Al received special permission to play with the Giants the last three 1944 games. His gridiron farewell was December 17 when the Giants opposed the Green Bay Packers for the title. Two days later Al was on his way to the front.

1st Lt. Lummus was killed in an infantry-tank attack which broke one of the Japs' final and most stubborn lines of resistance on Iwo Jima.

They Did Their Very Best!

STEVE OWEN
Giant Coach

THE Giants today close their 1945 season at the Polo Grounds. They have another game, in Washington next Sunday. But for the year they are through on their own field.

As Steve Owen's charges wind up their New York campaign, the Management wishes to thank all Giant fans for their splendid support.

Week after week, the Giant clientele turned out strong, and week after week the Giants did their very best. Too often, that was not good enough.

The National League has been changing, with men coming back from service, and in this season of reconversion, the Giants did not get a sufficient number of returnees to make themselves contenders for the championship.

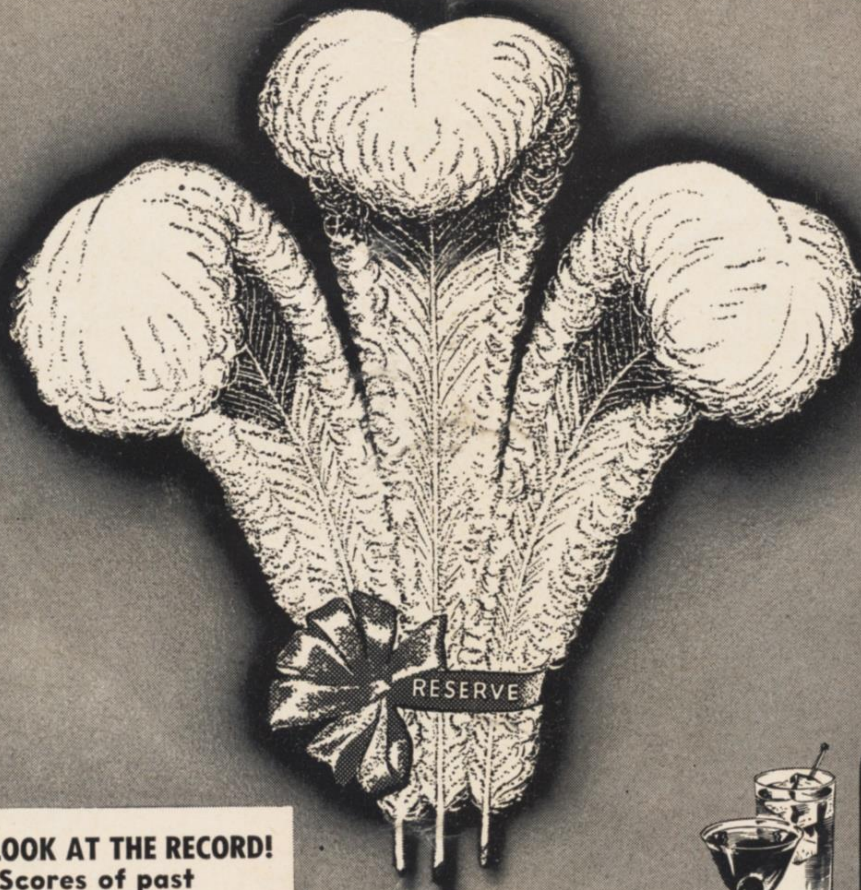

In 1944, the Giants landed all the way in the playoff with the Packers. But this year neither the Polo Grounders nor Green Bay could duplicate their 1944 successes.

The Management is highly appreciative of the fan support here and promises bigger and better things for 1946.

The Management also wishes to thank Horace Stoneham, the visiting clubs and the Stevens brothers,—Frank, Joe, Bill and Hal,—for their help in the vast service entertainment project carried on through the season.

With today's game, the total number of service men who were guests of the Giants since 1942 came to 125,000. That is a record of which the Giants are tremendously proud, and thankful to you fans who made it possible.

SHOULD old acquaintance be forgot? It never is, is it?—in so far as football is concerned. New York fans, of course, are sorry that the Giants could not get into the playoff. Giants Seek Their Nineteenth Victory Over Philadelphia

TODAY'S meeting of the Giants and the Eagles is No. 26 of a series started in 1933. The Giants have beaten the Eagles 18 times, with Philadelphia showing 6 victories. One battle resulted in a draw. That was the 21—21 game in 1944.

JOHNNY WEISS
End

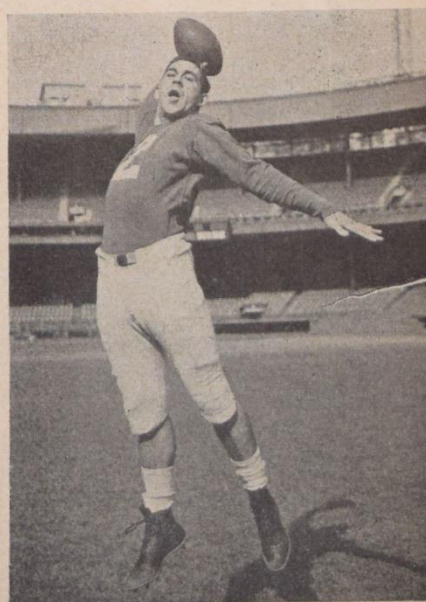

The Giants took the field today with determination to go all out for revenge. Early in the season the Eagles disposed of the locals rather summarily, 38 to 17, in Philadelphia.

George Franck, Giant of the Week!

GEORGE FRANCK
Who Can "Carry the Mail."

IN the battle with the Packers, George Franck, recently out of service, made himself the Giant of the Week. Franck did not score either of the New York touchdowns. Frank Liebel got the first when he caught a 26 yard pitch from Junior Hovious in the end zone. Bill Paschal tallied the second when he went over from the 3.

However, Franck set up that Paschal touchdown in the fourth quarter. George took Sorenson's kickoff and dashed 39 yards with it.

Not to be overlooked is Howie Livingston, who ran 37 yards after he had intercepted a pass against the Packers. Nor are Liebel and Johnny Weiss to be ignored in the aftermath of a splendid exhibition of football.

Grand Trio Closes 1945 Season With Giant Game in Washington

TAKE a good look at that picture above. Ken and Steve and Mel. A grand trio. They have been together on the gridiron a long time. They have done great things for the Giants. The years have come and the years have gone. But Ken and Mel never have let up in going all out for Stout Steve, the greatest coach in professional football.

For the things they have done, they deserve a big hand. For their part in the elevation of professional football to so high a state, they should get another hand — Ken and Steve and Mel.

THE Giants will finish their 1945 campaign away from home. They close in Washington next Sunday, when they will try to repay the Redskins for the 24 to 14 they handed Owen's lads on October 28 at the Polo Grounds.

The Giants show a substantial edge over the Redskins in their series, which started in 1932, when the Washington club was located in Boston.

The New York club has taken 17 games from the Redskins, who have won 9, with a couple of ties.

Rams Will Represent West; Eagles, Redskins Tied in East

THE National Football League championship competition today was close to the finale. In the Western half of the circuit, the Cleveland Rams already were the playoff representatives. They clinched their participation in the grand windup when they defeated Detroit on Thanksgiving Day, 28 to 21.

The Rams have a fast, hard hitting, clever outfit and will be plenty tough for the East, no matter who comes into the finale.

The Eastern situation became tenser than ever last Sunday when the Eagles trounced the Redskins, 16 to 0. As a consequence, today's contest between the Giants and the Philadelphia club becomes one of outstanding importance.

While the Eagles are playing here, and the Redskins are tackling the Pittsburgh Steelers, whom they already have beaten, 14 to 0.
