Pro Football League Rejects Four Changes in 1932 Rules

Adoption of only two of the new football rules by the National Professional league is a wise move, according to gridiron experts, who have been following the game for years.

By not accepting four major changes in the code drafted for the colleges this season, the post-graduate gridiron circuit keeps all the thrills of the game. The professionals have found that the wedge and other formations recently barred in collegiate contests, have not proven dangerous to professional football.

Changes rejected by the professionals are the rule that declares a ball dead if any part of the carrier's body touches the ground, the flying block and flying tackle, the kick-off rule that would give the kicking side choice of putting the ball in play with a drop kick and would force five members of the receiving side to be placed at a point directly in front of the ball, and the rule covering use of hands on defense.

The professionals believe the rule calling for a dead ball if a player slips and touches the ground would slow up the game. There is very little 'piling on' in the pro sport. It was this angle that the colleges stressed in adoption of the rule. The flying block and tackle are spectacular features of the game that should not be eliminated, the National league directors believe. They also point out that professional football has never had a fatal injury or one that permanently disabled any man, so have no reasons to change these codes.

Belief that the formations in kickoffs have little danger, the 'pros' rejected the section that dictates how a receiving side should be placed. The 'pros' agreed to let the receivers place their men in any formation and to use a natural tee for the kick-off so that long, high kicks can be made.

Use of hands on defense would be one of the hardest rules in the sport to enforce, the professionals believe, so they rejected it. It would be almost impossible for a referee to call this section correctly all of the time.

The two rule changes approved by the professionals cover the new regulations on equipment and the substitution of players in any subsequent period. Frequent changes of players will enable a coach to keep fresh men in the game and it should tend to greatly speed up activities on the gridiron.

CLYDE VAN SICKLE Guard

Clyde Van Sickle was an outstanding lineman with the University of Arkansas for three years. In his senior year he was chosen on several all-southern elevens and received some all-American mention by southern writers. He played pro ball with Frankford during the 1930 season.

PRO GRID NOTES

Randolph, Portsmouth center, started the Spartans on their lone touchdown march against the Giants when he grabbed a pass fumbled by Feather before it touched the ground. Soon after, 'Dutch' Clark slashed over the only counter.

The Chicago Bears and Packers staged a 'dog-fight' at Green Bay without either club being able to score. It was slam bang all the way with honors pretty well even up. The Packers had seven first downs to the Bears' six.

Two 'roomies' from the University of Pittsburgh, Rip Collins and Jim MacMurdo, are together again with the Boston Braves. Collins is an end while MacMurdo plays together. while MacMurdo plays tackle. Both gridders are 'freshmen' in professional football.

Leaders of the N.Y. Giants are expecting great things from Lee 'Brute' Mullenaux, a 200-pound backfielder from Arizona. He has speed to burn and sidesteps nicely in the open field. Mullenaux also kicks fairly well.

Tony Holm, who earned his foot-ball spurs at Alabama a few years back, is making a determined bid for the fullback job with the Chicago Cards. Holm is experienced in the post-graduate variety as he was with Portsmouth in 1931.

The Chicago Bears are well supplied with bone-crushing fullbacks as both Bronko Nagurski and Herb Joesting, a pair of former Minnesota footballers, know what it is all about when it comes to cracking through a forward wall.

George Kenneally, who has seen service with about a half dozen clubs in the Pro league, is making the grade with the Boston Braves. Kenneally is still a great end. He was a member of the championship Pottsville team in 1927.

Mitchell, a former Portsmouth high schooler, is showing lots of class behind the line for the Spartans. He is starring as a pass snagger and he caught a toss in the fracas with the Giants which put the ball in scoring distance.

The excess crop of pro footballers will soon be much in evidence as all of the National league teams must cut down to the 20 player limit after the third game. Some of the clubs have been carrying some 30 odd gridders.

George Lawrie, veteran Chicago football official, is drawing assign-ments again this fall in the National league. Lawrie has been handling the post-graduate games for a number of years and is well liked by the team executives.

Dan Blaine of the Stapleton club is making arrangements to handle a bumper throng this week end at Staten Island as the fast going Chi-cago Bears will be the attraction against Coach Harold Hanson's gridiron machine.

Professional football will make its debut in Boston on Sunday as Lud Wray's Braves will be at home to Benny Friedman's Brooklyn Dodgers. The Boston management has mapped an attractive program for the open-

Jack Chevigny and his Chicago Cardinals will match their gridiron skill against the Spartans at Ports-mouth this Sunday. This tilt should provide plenty of thrills for the spec-tators as both elevens have a good air attack air attack.

Jerry Cronin, one of the greatest all-around athletes, ever developed at Rutgers College, is the newest addition to the Brooklyn squad. Cronin is a big lanky end weighing about 200 pounds. He is right at home snagging passes ing passes.

The Providence Steamrollers, who are playing free-lance football this fall, took the Boston National league team into camp last Sunday, 9 to 0. Tommy Dowler, ex-Colgate star, intercepted a pass and ran 50 yards for a touchdown.

The Chicago Cardinals filled in an open date last Sunday by taking the Battle Creek, Mich., eleven into camp, 19 to 0. Hill, Tony Holm and Mike McNally came through with markers for the Cards. Battle Creek made but one first down.

Jack Grossman, recruit Brooklyn back, who promises to be one of the sensations of the Pro wheel this season, made the only score in the game against Stapleton last Sunday. He made a wide end run for a fourth quarter touchdown.

According to President Joe F. Carr, the attendance at the National league games so far this season is very encouraging. Portsmouth had a big house for the Giants, while the Chicago Bears performed before 12,000 at Green Bay.

The New York Giants are scheduled to make their annual appearance of the season in Green Bay on Sunday. Coach Steve Owens' aggregation will head for Wisconsin direct from their training camp at Magnetic Springs, O.
