.... AND WE SHALL HAVE MUSIC

FOOTBALL and music, both of them smart and snappy, go together like ice cream and cake. The rugged contact and thrills of the one supplement the pep, spirit and enthusiasm of the other. They come in the same package and there's plenty of both, wrapped and ready for delivery to Ebbets Field.

On the field tonight, before game-time and at the half, you will see "THE DODGERETTES," an all-girl band, smartly-gowned, well-drilled, every one a professional musician. They are here to add to your entertainment. They are part of pro football's revival in Brooklyn. They are a highly important factor in the Football Dodgers' blueprint for building the finest "all-around" organization in the game.

"THE DODGERETTES" have been assembled and selected from the finest girl musicians in the metropolitan area. Frank Kneisel, their conductor, is one of the outstanding men in the world of music, a member of the faculty at the Juilliard School of Music. Julian Opsohl, their drillmaster, is equally outstanding in choreography.

Sylvia, the pretty drum majorette, is without equal in the East. She learned baton twirling at Memorial High School, East New York, N. J., and has perfected her skill far beyond that of other majorettes. She originated and developed her own routines and specializes in two-baton handling which most girl majorettes do not attempt.

It was way back there in April when Bill Cox, executive vice president of the Dodgers conferred with Kneisel and began the groundwork for "THE DODGERETTES." Detail work through the intervening months le dto the first rehears I early in September. The first rehearsal led to hard work, more rehearsals and more hard work. And finally the first public appearance . . . tonight. "THE DODGERETTES" are here, ready to perform . . . for your entertainment . . . for your approval.

Not the least spectacular feature of "THE DODGERETTES" is the costume, black and gold in motif, with knee-length flare skirt, tight-fitting jacket with shield front and elbow-length cuffs. The costume is the creation of Miss Ethelle Schiller, well-known European designer who has been in this country since before the war and now is reentering the field of fashion and design here.

"THE DODGERETTES" will perform at all home games of the Football Dodgers and at the Yankee Stadium for the Dodger-Yankee game on Saturday night, Oct. 19. At Ebbets Field, they have their own, heated dressing room and are attended by a wardrobe mistress. An equipment man is in charge of the instruments, sheet music and numerous other musical props. From start to finish, "THE DODGERETTES" are the finest such musical unit ever organized for the entertainment of football fans, college or professional.

MESSAGE TO OUR FANS

The new Football Dodgers are happy to bring professional football back to Brooklyn as a member team of the All-America Conference. The Management acknowledges that its very presence here imposes an obligation to present top-flight football and entertainment for its fans. It intends to meet that obligation 100 per cent.

in such a manner that the playing area is fully visible from every seat.

In addition to these innovations, we have sodded the baseball infield to provide an all-turf playing area. We arranged for two of the finest electrically-operated scoreboards in the country and finally we erected temporary field stands which

When the organization started over one year ago, we were faced with a vast amount of work. We tackled it with two driving thoughts: first, the necessity for building a colorful and successful football team; second, the equal necessity for providing you, our fans, with every possible convenience for the better enjoyment of our games.

At the outset we were aided immeasurably by the All-America Conference schedule. Because of it, we can guarantee our fans that every team and every star in the Conference will perform at Ebbets Field. This guarantee eliminates one of the most grievous flaws in previous football operations in the borough.

We then set about making "spectator" improvements. We decided that every seat would be a reserved seat, regardless of the price level. We constructed a special, concrete player dugout which assures lower stand patrons of full, unobstructed vision of the game. We laid out the field provide several thousand additional midfield seats.

Not the least, by far, of our accomplishments are "THE DODGERETTES," our all-girl, all-professional band which will perform at each of the seven home games and at the Yankee Stadium on Oct. 19 when we play the Yankees. We hope that "THE DODGERETTES" will appeal to your eye as well as your ear and that their performance will help you obtain full value in your quest for sparkling, satisfying entertainment.

In these innovations and in many lesser ones, we have been prompted by the conviction that your comfort and convenience, your pleasure and enjoyment is the all-necessary consideration in our success. We shall always be responsive to your criticisms and ever appreciative of your support.

The approach to Perfection!

Football belongs largely to speed, brawn, brain and the unending desire to approach perfection, with the goal line as its reward.

Clothes by the modern Rogers Peet also express the approach to perfection.

Indeed, perfection is always uppermost in the mind of Rogers Peet's Master-Designer perfection in fabric, style, tailoring and fit perfection in clothes for young men, and men who never grow old.

 With our compliments! Call, phone or write for Rogers Peet's Football Handbook for 1946.

WHAT THE DOCTOR ORDERS

Dodgers Stress Offense Under Mal Stevens and Hank Reese

Best known in football circles, perhaps, for his uncanny knack of getting the most out of his material, Mal Stevens, erstwhile head coach at Yale and N.Y.U., is making his debut in the professional ranks as head mentor of the Football Dodgers.

It's not an easy assignment, this being a rookie coach with rookie players in a rookie league. But Mal is long accustomed to doing the best under hazardous conditions and along with his chief aide, Hank Reese, he has tackled this task with energy and imagination that are bound to bring results.

Mal—Dr. Marvin A. Stevens in medical circles—learned his football out in Kansas. He was a five-star athlete at Washburn College but transferred to Yale and with the Bulldogs, in '23, achieved All-America recognition for his spectacular performance at halfback on what was one of the greatest Yale elevens of all time.

His varsity eligibility having expired, he was appointed assistant coach at Yale in '24. In '25 he entered the Yale Medical School and ever since has followed both medicine and football with equal success.

HANK REESE

DR. MARVIN A. (MAL) STEVENS

In '29 he became head coach at Yale, holding that position until '34 when he transferred allegiance to N.Y.U. Though handicapped by lack of material, Mal's talents were well recognized at N.Y.U. and he continued as head mentor of the Violets until war broke out in '41.

Mal then entered the Navy Medical Corps. He was first stationed at Sampson N.T.S. where he also coached the football team. In '43, he saw overseas duty in the ETO and in '44 and '45 in the South Pacific. Now, back in civilian life, he has resumed his twofold career, and is again practicing medicine and coaching football.

Mal had never before worked with Hank Reese in football. But after preliminary meetings, the two quickly found that their thoughts and theories about the game followed common channels. The two make a good team.

Hank is an old hand at football, college and pro. In '32, he became one of the first Temple U. players ever to be recognized in All-America brackets. From '33 to '37 he played a sparkling game at center for the Giants. In '38 he moved to Philadelphia and remained with the Eagles until '40 when he joined the old New York Yankees as assistant coach. Came the war and Hank too entered service. He served for four years and last Winter received his discharge from the Navy as a Lieutenant Commander.

Always offense-minded, Dr. Stevens, as might be expected has an offensive team. His system is basically single-wing though he has incorporated into it so many variations and other formations, he now calls it his A-Z system. "Why not?" he asks. "It includes everything from A to Z."

Commissioner

York franchise, withdrew and was replaced by Gene Tunney. The Baltimore franchise which Tunney formerly held was left open. Harvey Hester of Miami accepted as franchise owner.

Dec. 23, '44—Lt. Comdr. Jack Meagher, USNR, signed two-year contract as coach of Miami Seehawks.

Feb. 13, '45—Lt. Paul Brown, USNR, accepted five-year contract at $25,000 a year to coach Cleveland Browns. Chicago Rockets announced signing of ten-year lease for Soldier Field.

Apr. 20, '45—Fourth Conference meeting held in Chicago. Mrs. Eleanor Gehrig appointed treasurer of the Conference. Conference rules and regulations approved. Uniform player contract adopted. Committee appointed to confer with Elmer Layden, Commissioner of National Football League, about working agreement between the two leagues. Layden declined to enter conference saying "There is nothing to talk about until some one gets a football and plays a game." The following six clubs were officially admitted to the Conference: Buffalo, Chicago, Cleveland, Miami, Los Angeles, and San Francisco. Application for franchise by Kansas City group considered.

Aug. 31, '45—Fifth meeting held in Chicago. Jimmy Crowley named president as well as commissioner of the Conference. Mrs. Gehrig appointed secretary as well as

Oct. 16, '45—William D. Cox accepted as operator of Brooklyn franchise, making seven teams in the Conference fold for 1946.

Dec. 5, '45—Dan Topping, originally owner of Brooklyn franchise in National League, admitted to Conference as holder of New York franchise in the Conference, replacing Gene Tunney.

Dec. 19, '45—Edward P. (Slip) Madigan named general manager of Los Angeles Dons.

Jan. 4, '46—Baltimore franchise, originally left open but now owned by Edward Neilson, agreed to remain inactive for coming season. It was decided to split Conference into Eastern and Western Divisions with top team in each meeting in championship playoff.

Jan. 10, '46—New York announced signing of Frank Sinkwich, NFL most valuable player in 1944 with Detroit Lions.

Jan. 12, '45—Elmor Layden displaced as commissioner of National League and replaced by Bert Bell.

Jan. 20, '46—Dud Degroot, ex-coach of Washington Redskins, appointed coach of Los Angeles Dons. Ray Flaherty, also former coach of Redskins, appointed head coach of Yankees.

MRS. ELEANOR GEHRIG

Feb. 20, '46—Los Angeles Coliseum commission awarded five dates to Los Angeles Dons for 1946, with one more to be added. This completed line-up of stadiums as follows: Buffalo—Civic; Brooklyn—Ebbets field; Chicago—Soldier field; Cleveland—Municipal; Miami—Orange Bowl; New York—Yankee stadium; San Francisco—Kezar.

March 3, '46—First All-America Conference schedule drawn up.

April 7-12, '46—Seventh meeting held. Schedule approved by all members. Largest charter contract in history signed with United Airlines providing for 100 per cent air travel by all Conference teams.

May 22, '46—Boston Yankees of NFL announced signing of Angelo Bertelli, Notre Dame All-American quarterback, who had previously signed contract for 1946 and 1947 with Los Angeles Dons. Los Angeles club threatened suit. (Court decision later awarded Bertelli's services to Los Angeles.)

July 15, '46—Brooklyn Dodgers under Coach Mal Stevens and Chicago Rockets, then under Coach Dick Hanley, first Conference teams to open training.

Aug. 18, '46—More than 20,000 watch Dodgers and Rockets play 14-14 tie in first exhibition game between Conference teams. Game played in Multnomah Stadium, Portland, Ore.

Aug. 30, '46—More than 36,000, record-breaking attendance for a pro football exhibition game, watch Cleveland Browns defeat Dodgers 35-20 at Akron, Ohio.

Sept. 6, '46—Cleveland Browns defeat Miami Seahawks 44-0 in first regularly scheduled game in All-America Conference. Attendance of 60,135 set new all-time record for attendance at a pro football game.

PRO FOOTBALL IN BROOKLYN

PRO football was a scrawny babe in arms when Eddie Butler, former Syracuse grid great, introduced it to Brooklynites twenty years ago. It was a sickly, weazened little creature endowed with little else than a supreme confidence in its right to existence and the courage to wage a struggle for almost imperceptible gains from year to year.

Now, pro football in Brooklyn is a raw-boned, steel-muscled youth ready to burst out in the full bloom of a mature, major factor in the borough's entertainment and sporting life. The game is at its peak in the Brooklyn scene. It has taken life from new, energetic and imaginative ownership and from the birth of the new All-America Conference, pro football's second major league.

When Butler moved the first pro franchise into Brooklyn in '26, the National League was a twenty-one team circuit. Brooklyn finished fourteenth that season and the obviously unprofitable venture was dropped.

In '30, Bill Dwyer and John Depler purchased the Dayton franchise in the N.F.L. and moved it to Brooklyn. They operated for three years and then in '33, they relinquished the franchise to Shipwreck Kelly and Chris Cagle, who a year later sold it to Dan Topping.

Dan struggled with the franchise for eleven years, enjoying only one brief period of success, in '40 and '41. In those years, the team, coached by Jock Sutherland, finished second in the Eastern Division.

At the outbreak of war, the fortunes of the Brooklyn franchise slipped even further. The team won only three games in '42, two in '43. In '44, the team merged with Boston and failed to win even one game throughout the schedule. Last year, again merged with Boston, the team did not play at Ebbets Field at all.

Returning from service with the Marines late last year, Topping, along with Larry MacPhail and Del Webb, purchased the Yankee baseball empire. Unable to reach agreement on the rental of Ebbets Field for his football enterprise, Dan switched his gridiron operations to the Stadium. Then, unable to obtain satisfactory schedule dates from the National League, he bolted to the new All-America Conference.

Meanwhile, no sooner had Topping deserted Ebbets Field, than the Conference moved in. The four-man syndicate headed by Bill Cox, which held the Brooklyn franchise in the Conference, concluded arrangements to play in Ebbets Field. The syndicate which included Gerald Smith, Street and Smith Publishing Co.; Charles P. Grimes, prominent Manhattan attorney, and Mal Stevens, obtained the services of Freddy Fitzsimmons as Business Manager, set up spacious office quarters in the Boro Hall area and plunged into the rebirth of pro football in Brooklyn with energy and imagination and the Conference cooperation it had lacked previously.

DODGERS' NFL RECORD

Program Cover by Schoolboy Artist

The Football Dodgers are proud to present this first program with its prize winning cover, designed and drawn by Joseph Salvia of 2773 W. 5th St., Brooklyn, a student at Abraham Lincoln High School. The cover won the $50 first prize in a borough-wide contest open to students at Brooklyn schools. Seven prizes in all, totaling $185, were awarded to the participants.
