THE LONG VIEW ON THE GIANTS

"What's the matter with the Giants?"

This has been the cry ever since Steve Owen's young squad, which made such a fine impression in its pre-season exhibition victory over the mighty Chicago Bears and then beat Boston decisively in its National League opener, suddenly went into a tailspin and lost to Washington, Philadelphia and the champion Chicago Cardinals.

The answer should be fairly obvious. Basically, it is "an excess of youth."

For immediate purposes, perhaps, this may be regarded as a fault. However, with an organization like the Giants, who have been doing business at their Polo Grounds stand, through many good seasons and a few bad ones, for twenty-four years, it is the long view that counts most and they prefer to consider this shortcoming of the present squad as a virtue that will be well-rewarded in the not-too-distant future.

With a young team, operating under a new system of play, to boot, early defeats must be accepted as inevitable. The Mara Family, Steve Owen and his aides and the players themselves are not happy about them, of course. No one likes to lose.

However, as every one close to the situation is well aware, this is merely a passing phase in the development of a worthy successor to the great Giant teams of the past. The confidence of the organization in this squad remains unshaken. Losses can be endured when you know the pendulum soon will swing the other way.

The twenty rookies and the young veterans who make up the Giant squad have their future ahead of them. It is bound to be bright, for these players possess all the natural attributes that go into football success. They have speed, power, strength, deftness, combativeness and keen reactions. They have spirit and they want to win.

All they lack is experience. That has to come the hard way. The seasoning process in a football circuit as fast and as tough as the established National League is severe. But when the quality is there, as it certainly is with the Giants, the finished product will be a good one.

Jack Mara, the Giant president, hit it pretty well the other day when he drew a comparison between the 1948 Giants and the Eagles and Cardinals of a couple of years back. The 1947 divisional champions, with less obligation than the Giants to string along with holdover talent, launched their rebuilding projects right after the war. They were slapped down hard before they fought to the top.

That's the way it has to be when a team starts all over from scratch like the Giants did this year. Young teams get knocked down and crucify themselves with the mistakes of inexperience, but young teams also get up off the floor swinging and lay favored rivals low.

Don't sell the 1948 Giants short. One of these Sunday afternoons, there will be a big explosion at the Polo Grounds and some unhappy foe of the Giants will be blown clear to the top of Coogan's Bluff. It may happen today.

GIANT OFFENSE ROLLING NOW

Last Sunday the Giants were beaten by the Cardinals, 63 to 35. It would appear that a score of that size would leave little to gloat over for the beaten side.

However, those who have been following the varied fortunes of the New York team see in the 35 points rolled up against Jimmy Conzelman's defense reason for satisfaction. There is some balm in the gridiron Gilead, after all.

Now that Steve Owen has got his scoring machinery functioning, the Old Master may be depended on to start producing on the defensive side, as well. For when it comes to defense, Stout Steve has enjoyed a reputation quite his own among the coaches of the National League.

Let us run over developments of last Sunday in this circuit. While the Giants were snagged in their scoring battle with the Chicago Cardinals, Philadelphia defeated Washington by 45 to 0; Boston won from Pittsburgh, 13 to 7; the Chicago Bears shut out Detroit, 28 to 0; and Green Bay's Packers blanked Los Angeles, 16 to 0.

Adding up the points totalled by the four losing teams other than the Giants, we find that they made seven points. The New York club got 28 more than the four other losing clubs put together.

The captious critic may say that there is small consolation for the Giants in this arithmetical point in favor of Stout Steve. However, the close student of football knows his trends. They prove something definite, and this accumulation of 35 points by the Giants is an important indicator.

Standing out in the New York offensive against the Cardinals was Bill Swiacki, former Columbia end playing his first season of professional football.

The pass catching magic which Swiacki demonstrated under Lou Little, particularly in that memorable victory over the Army eleven last Fall, is being capitalized by Bill under Owen.

Opposing teams are getting into the habit of paying Swiacki the high compliment of assigning two defenders to take care of him. They used to do that only against Don Hutson of the Packers.

The Columbia colony on the Giants has grown to be a sizeable entity. In addition to Swiacki, there are Bruce Gehrke and Paul Governali.

Governali has been slow in developing his old pitching talents, but this department is being taken care of in brilliant fashion by Charley Conerly.

In scoring those 35 points against the Cardinals, the Giants profited from the skills of Joe Johnson, Ray Poole, and Conerly, as well as the twice effective Swiacki.

The 35,342 football fans who saw the scoring fight with Conzelman's team left the Polo Grounds with the impression that the Giants finally had begun to go ahead.

FOOTBALL and ROGERS PEET

Although the first professional football game was played 53 years ago in 1895 (when Rogers Peet had just come of age—21 years old that same Fall) . . . it wasn't until 1921 that the foundation of the National League gave the game the tremendous impetus that culminated 2 years ago in the formation of the All-America Conference.

With 18 major teams now playing in two leagues that pack the Polo Grounds, Yankee Stadium, and Ebbets Field here in Greater New York, and Fenway Park in Boston . . . and countless other good teams playing elsewhere...Professional Football has become, in a little more than a decade, one of the greatest of all sports.

We've seen a lot of good football! And so have Rogers Peet customers . . . attired correctly through all the style changes of 74 years, and comfortably from the first warm early-season openers to the last coldweather climax games on the schedule.

GIANTS OF THE WEEK

Conerly Named as Schaefer Award Winner for Third Time This Season; White Selected as Outstanding Lineman Against Cardinals

JIM WHITE

Chuckin' Charlie Conerly, of course, was a command selection as Giant back-of-the week for his great all-around performance last Sunday against the Chicago Cardinals. The Schaefer award for line-man-of-the-week went to Jim White for his stalwart play at tackle.

The choice of Conerly—who also was named in the road games against Boston and Washington—was dictated by the fact that he threw four touchdown passes and scored once himself, thus having a hand in every Giant score.

In the greatest performance of his young career in professional football, the 1947 All-America from Mississippi completed 17 of 26 passes for 257 yards. The experts hit it right when they described Conerly as the new Sammy Baugh!

Besides his aerial achievements, Conerly ran the ball well and did a good job of punting. It has been a long time since the Giants have had a triple threat back of his rare ability.

That White's defensive play caught the fancy of the jury, who might have been expected to select a pass-catching end as the outstanding lineman in so wild-and-wooly a scoring battle, is a tribute to the heroic job he did in manning the dike.

This burly New York native, a Notre Dame graduate, made more than a full quota of tackles on a day when tackles that stuck were few and far between. Limited to part-time play by injuries in the early games, it was the first real chance White has had to distinguish himself this season.

The Schaefer Awards, established by the F. and M. Schaefer Brewing Company, go each week to the back and the lineman who, in the opinion of experts, contribute the most valuable services to the Giants.

After every Giant contest—at home or away—leading sports writers are polled by secret ballot. Their selections are announced each Tuesday at the weekly Giant press luncheon and the names of the winners are carried in this program the following Sunday.

Each Schaefer Award winner receives his choice of a list of articles of merchandise from a leading store. The prizes are suitably engraved and stamped with a special insignia.

In addition to the weekly awards, Schaefer Most Valuable Player prizes will be presented at the end of the season to the Giant back and lineman who have collected the most votes for outstanding play in the six HOME games at the Polo Grounds.

These season awards will be determined by the vote of the fans attending the Giant games. For your convenience, a ballot is attached. Fill out the blanks, follow the instructions and help your favorite Giant players win handsome prizes and trophies. The complete list of Schaefer Award winners to

NEW COACH OF THE STEELERS

The Pittsburgh Steelers come to the Polo Grounds under a new coach but with all their old reputation as professional football's leading exponent of the classic "rock and sock" principles.

Entrusted with the unenviable job of filling the shoes of the late Dr. John Bain (Jock) Sutherland is John P. Michelosen. The feeling in Pittsburgh is that no one is better suited to carry on in the lofty traditions of the Steelers' idolized Silent Scot.

For the better part of his 32 years, Michelosen has been a keen and active student of football. His name has seldom appeared in the headlines but, with those who know football best, this broad-shouldered, soft-spoken fellow is considered one of the topnotch young men in the game today.

He spent ten years sharpening his already ample football knowledge under Dr. Sutherland. While he was in the background so far as the general public was concerned, he was a highly valued and trusted assistant of the Old Master, whose place he now fills.

Michelosen is a native of Ambridge, Pa., a bustling little industrial community on the Ohio River, some thirty miles west of Pittsburgh. His parents are Ukrainian immigrants, who had high hopes that their only son would grow up to be a musician. So intent were they on arranging his vocation, that they bought him a violin almost as soon as he was big enough to tuck the instrument under his chin.

Then, along came a sports-minded uncle, who gave young Michelosen a football. Although his parents failed to realize it, this gift dashed all musical ambitions their son might have had. Needless to say, Michelosen devoted more time to passing and kicking the football than fingering the violin. The result was that he became one of the outstanding high school athletes in his town. His violin probably still is gathering-dust in the family attic.

He moved on to the University of Pittsburgh, where for three varsity seasons he quarterbacked some of Pittsburgh's greatest teams. He was the big bloke who handled the blocking assignments. Not often did the

Have heavy hearts this fall.
The greatest coach they ever had
Is gone beyond recall.
His coaching reputation
Was as solid as a rock
There'll never be another
That will take the place of "Jock."

They called big "Jock" the silent Scot
He hadn't much to say.
He was content to show his worth
Upon the field of play.
He took each pat upon the back
Just like he would a knock.
For football was the very life

It sure is hard to realize
Jock Sutherland is gone.
But though he's passed from gridiron scenes
His fame will linger on.

Billy Neilan.

fans note the guy leading the way and seldom were his backbending efforts the subject of kudos by the attending press.

However, Dr. Sutherland, well aware of his unsung contributions, always had a warm spot in his heart for Big Mike. He drafted Michelosen as an assistant coach at Pittsburgh in 1938 and this was the beginning of an inseparable combination that was terminated only by the Old Master's death last spring.

When Jock resigned at Pitt, Johnny quit with him. When Jock accepted the head coaching job at Brooklyn, Johnny went with him. When Jock joined the Navy, Johnny followed suit. And when Jock returned to the place he loved best — Pittsburgh — to coach the Steelers, Johnny returned too.

In his brief span with the pros, Dr. Sutherland came mighty close, but never quite won the championship. Michelosen is not a maudlin guy but he hopes that within the next few years, he can win the title for the "Old Man."

NEW YORK GIANTS VS. PITTSBURGH STEELERS GAME

STEVE VAN BUREN HEADS THIS WAY

Next Sunday will find the Giants on the road, playing the Bears in Chicago. However, the following Sunday, November 7, the New York club will be back at the Polo Grounds, engaging the Philadelphia Eagles.

Meeting the Eagles will involve for the Giants the chore of stopping Steve Van Buren, one of the greatest backs in football these last few years.

Anybody who makes any pretense of following professional gridiron play knows all about Van Buren of LSU, who can move that ball with a speed and consistency which helped him set an all time league record with 1008 yards gained, and 14 touchdowns.

Last year Van Buren put on a field day against Washington, with 17 carries for 138 yards.

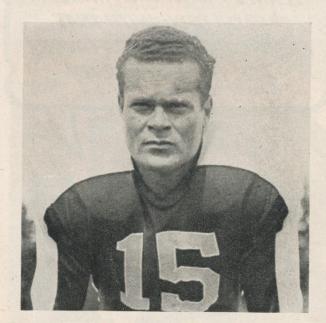

Last week, in a 45 to 0 triumph over the Redskins, Steve scored three touchdowns and assisted nobly in piling up 28 first downs, to match a National League record.

With the Philadelphia ensemble at the Polo Grounds also will be Cliff Patton, a great kicker, who used to be a professional baseball player and whose dad was a catcher in the Texas League.

Greasy Neale has a fine associate for Van Buren in the ball toting industry, in Bosh Pritchard, who is in his fourth season with the Eagles. Last week Bosh ran 32 yards for a touchdown. Bosh and Joe Muha were team mates at VMI.

The Eagles have that typical Neale offensive. There are forwards, there are laterals. Greasy takes advantage of every possible weapon for scoring, and his team is not adept in that alone. Its defensive qualities were stressed against the Redskins, who not only failed to score, but kept them bottled up until the last few minutes, when Washington was stopped on the 13. Previously, it had not advanced beyond Philadelphia's 46 yard mark.

Let it be noted that the week before they ran into that big surprise against the Eagles, the Redskins held the strong Pittsburgh Steelers to a 10 to 7 score, in a fiercely fought battle.

STEVE VAN BUREN

National League history proves that competition between the Giants and the Eagles rarely is of the tender variety.

It will be recollected that in 1946, after the Eagles had taken the Polo Grounders by 24 to 14, the Giants turned around and whaled Neale's team by 45 to 17.

This season, a visit by the Giants to Philadelphia on October 10 resulted in a 45 to 0 defeat for the New York team.

Steve Owen is not one who is likely to let an affront like that go without some measure of vengeance.

POLO GROUNDS PARKING

Attention of Giant football fans is called to the new Polo Grounds parking lot, which will be in service for all Giant home games. Situated on Eighth Avenue, immediately adjacent to the Polo Grounds, this new lot provides parking accommodations for 1,500 cars at the nominal fee of 50 cents. It is operated by the management of the Polo Grounds. TEAM UP WITH THE WINNER!

EAGLES, BEARS LEAD NFL DIVISIONAL RACES

Philadelphia's crushing victory over Washington last Sunday moved Greasy Neale's Eagles out in front of the see-sawing National League Eastern Division race. With a 2-1-1 record, Philadelphia holds a half-game edge over the Redskins and the Steelers, each of whom have won two and lost two.

Meanwhile the unbeaten Chicago Bears, the only team on the circuit that still has a spotless slate, kept their place at the top of the Western Division by downing Detroit. It was the fourth triumph in a row for Luckman, Lujack, Lane and Co.

On a day that produced three lopsided shutouts and a 13-7 game, Polo Grounds fans were lucky in having ringside seats at the wildest-scoring battle in the NFL's 29-year history. Ninety-eight points were registered as the Giants and the Cardinals produced a total of fourteen touchdowns.

As the winner of this jamboree, Jimmy Conzelman's Cards kept hot on the heels of the Bears. Last year's champions, beaten only by their Chicago rivals in a close contest, have won three and are only a half-game behind. Green Bay, with a 3-2 record, also remains in a contending position in the West.

The mighty Bears lead the league both in offense and defense. The George Halas blend of veteran and rookie stars has piled up 143 points as against 45 for the opposition. The Eagles rank a close second in both departments with 132 for and 49 against.

Steelers Now A Stern Rival Of Giants

There used to be a time when a meeting between the Giants and the Steelers meant that a victory for New York could be almost automatically chalked up in advance.

Relations between the clubs were inaugurated in 1933 and it was not until 1936, in the seventh game of the series, that Pittsburgh was able to break into the winning column.

Giant domination continued with three triumphs, a narrow loss in the second meeting of 1938 and another winning streak of six straight games.

Pittsburgh's first real cause to cheer was in 1942, when the Steelers took both ends of the home-and-home series against the tattered remnants of Steve Owen's fine young 1941 squad, riddled by the more pressing demands of the military services.

During the height of the war, the Pittsburgh franchise was inoperative. When relations were resumed in 1945, with the late great Jock Sutherland directing the reorganized Steelers, the Giants learned that the old order had indeed changed.

From being an easy mark, Pittsburgh became a rival of the first rank and the postwar meetings of the teams have been distinguished by some of the fiercest competition the National League has known.

In 1945, the games were divided and, although the Giants won both ends of the 1946 series, the 17-14 and 7-0 scores indicate how closely fought the battles were. Last year Pittsburgh, with the best team in its history, scored by 28-21 and 24-7.

With Johnny Michelosen carrying on in the best Sutherland tradition, the Giants are figuring on another rugged afternoon with the Steelers.
