The "All-American" Team

The brands all America selects for its smoking pleasure

ROOSEVELT BROWN

It was nice to see them back.

UR inspirational message of the last program was answered. "Get back to work," we told the Giants. They responded by beating the Redskins, 30-0, pitching their first shutout of the season.

By winning, our boys kept hot on the trail of the Cleveland Browns for the National League's Eastern Division title. With three games left for each team, the Giants trail the Browns by one game in the standings.

By beating the Eagles here today, which does not figure to be an easy task, and then bearding the Lions in their Detroit den a week from today, which could be even a tougher chore, the Giants can retain a shot at the title.

Cleveland's games before the Browns' visit to the Stadium on Dec. 14 are with Washington in Cleveland today and with the Eagles in Philadelphia next Sunday.

It's wishful thinking to hope that the Browns will lose either of these contests and equally wishful thinking to expect the Giants to win today and next Sunday. However, as Sunday after Sunday demonstrates, the National Football League path is strewn with booby traps.

Between today and the Dec. 14 showdown, the Giants can win one or two games or lose one or two. Ditto the Browns. That's not even taking ties into consideration.

Just at a guess, though, we suspect the teams will match records in their next two starts. That would produce a dormie situation, bringing the Browns to the Stadium one game in front with one to play.

Under such circumstances, the Giants, by defeating the Browns, could tie for the divisional title and there would be a play-off. Naturally, we'd prefer to win outright but this has been such an exciting season that no one would seriously object to an extra game.

The Giants gave a highly encouraging performance against Washington. While they probably were not as good as the 30-0 score indicated, they showed a much closer resemblance to the real Giants who beat the Browns and Colts than the impostors who wore Giant uniforms in the Pittsburgh debacle of the previous Sunday.

It was nice to see the defensive platoon close ranks solidly again. It was even nicer to see the offensive platoon take charge, after some early indecisiveness, and click off 95 and 54 yards to touchdowns in two of the season's most impressive sustained marches.

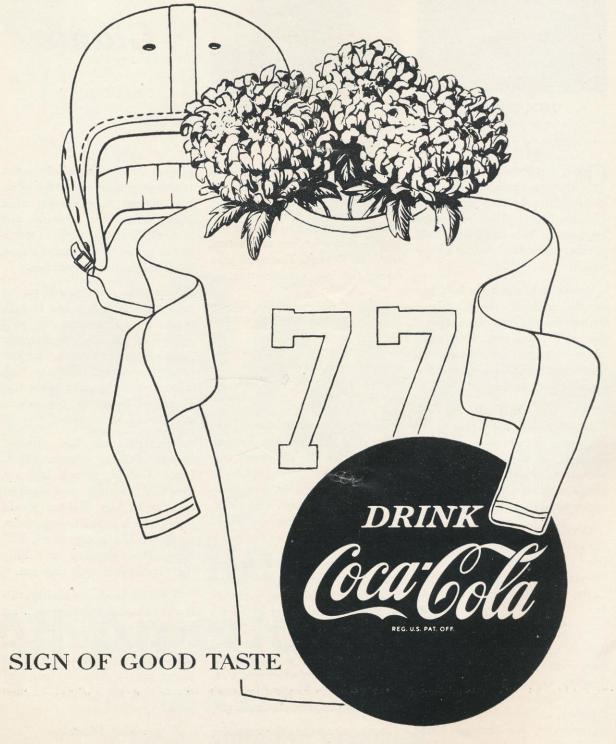

We're still waiting, and so, we know, is Coach Jim Lee Howell, to see the Giants come up to a kick-off at full offensive strength. There's a chance that may happen today. Roosevelt Brown and Jack Stroud, whose blocking in the line means so much to the attack, weren't visibly reinjured.

Don Heinrich has rejoined Charley Conerly at quarterback. Frank Gifford, though still not completely himself, gets stronger each week. Alex Webster should soon be back in the line-up, today we hope. The young backs, Phil King, Don Maynard and Billy Lott, look better each time out.

When all hands are healthy, this is a devastating attacking unit. We have seen too little of it at full strength this season. Today, we hope, will be the day when all the pieces are in place. If they stay there, that place could be first place.

Keep rolling, Giants!

Alex Webster: Giant of the Day

The Crasher From Kearny Is at His Best When the Going Is Hard

TODAY is Alex Webster Day at Yankee Stadium. Some 500 of Alex's friends from East Brunswick, N. J., are on hand to honor the big Giant halfback in halftime ceremonies.

Though only in his fourth season as a Giant, the 27-year-old Webster is the fourth best ground-gainer in Giant history, having rushed for more than 2,000 yards at a 4.1-yard average. Only Eddie Price in six seasons, Tuffy Leemans in eight, and Frank Gifford in seven outrank him, and only Gifford has a better average per try, at 4.4.

Since joining the Giants, Webster has been the heavy-duty runner called on to make the clutch play on third down, and has scored more touchdowns from inside the 5-yard line than any other back. He has been reliable, hits hard and fights for the extra yard needed so desperately in those situations.

Though not especially fast, Alex is called the team's best broken field runner by Giant coaches and has made more long gainers than any other back. As a rookie he made runs of 71, 53, 48 and 41 yards; weighed in with 55, 43 and 34 yarders in '56; 41 and 34 yarders in '57 and has 54 and 37 yarders already in '58.

Webster was born and brought up in Kearny, N. J., and was an All-State high school back in 1949. At that time, he was already working part time to support a widowed mother and did not have the credits to attend a fashionable eastern college.

So he chose North Carolina State, a decision which almost cost him heavily. Football there was at a low ebb. "All I can remember of most college games," Alex says now, "is standing in the end zone catching kickoffs after the other team had scored."

Thus he had little football reputation when he reported to the training camp of the Washington Redskins in 1953. The Redskins gave him the barest of trials, decided he didn't have enough speed and cut hm from the team.

Alex was married then, was still helping his mother, and his wife was about to have a baby. Desperate for a job, he wired Peahead Walker, coach of the Montreal Alouettes: "I have just been cut by the Redskins. I am in good shape and if you are looking for a halfback, can give you recommendations from my coaches."

Montreal, it turned out, was looking for a halfback, so Walker wired Alex to come on up. He did and, within 18 months, was the reigning star of the Canadian game. He is still so popular in Montreal, four years after he left there, that he must drive up to make talks or other appearances every time the Giants are near the border. (The Giants trained in northern Vermont in '56 and '57.)

Giant scout Al DeRogatis watched Webster churn up the Canadian League in '54, and advised Jim Lee Howell to get Alex if possible. Since Webster had been a Giant fan all his life, the switch was arranged. In his second season he scored two touchdowns and made a 55-yard run to beat the Bears in the world championship play-off.

Two years ago he moved to East Brunswick, N. J., where he lives in a split level house with his wife, Louise, and their two youngsters. Now his friends are honoring him. In so doing, they also are honoring themselves. Alex is a Giant in every sense of the word.

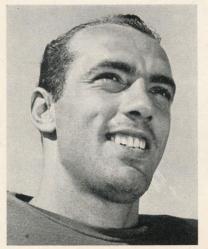

It's certainly O.K. with us, Hy Finn! Matter of fact, most of the American Motorists who've tried new CHEVRON Supreme Gasoline feel that way. So if you haven't discovered this outstanding super-premium gasoline yet, don't wait any longer. Make friends with CHEVRON Supreme and its great teammate, RPM Supreme Motor Oil, yourself — at any CALSO Station.

Philip King

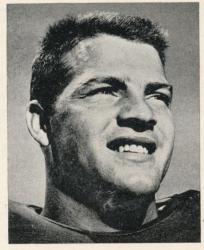

The Giants appear to have made no mistake in naming Phil King (24) as their No. 1 choice in last winter's draft. This big (6-4 and 225) boy from Vanderbilt is a riproaring runner from either halfback or fullback and also is a gifted pass-receiver. "Part Indian but all football player," Phil is nicknamed "The Chief."

Don Chandler

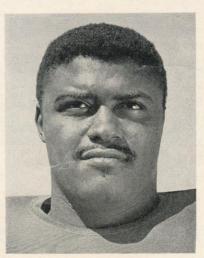

Don Chandler (34) led the NFL punting with a 44.6-yard average as a Giant sophomore last year after having finished among the leaders with a 41.9-yard average as a rookie. The Florida alumnus, a No. 5 draft choice in 1955 after winning the collegiate punting title, also is a long-distance place-kicker. More than just a specialist, Don sees some backfield service, too.

Giant Album

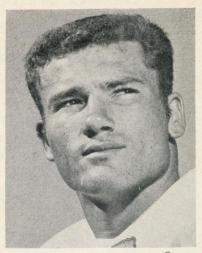

Trank Gifford

Frank Gifford (16) is back for his seventh season with the Giants after a period of doubt as to whether he'd quit football to pursue exclusively his budding career in Hollywood. Backs don't come any better than the ruggedly handsome USC alumnus. No. 1 draft choice of the Giants in 1952, he has been their No. 1 all-around player ever since.

Rosy Grier

A spectacular performer for the Giants in 1955-56, Roosevelt Grier (76) is back in harness after a year in the Army. A 270-pounder who is as fast and nimble as many halfbacks, Rosy is one of the most destructive tackles in the business. A Penn State graduate, he hails from Linden, N. J.

Son, Maynard

Don Maynard (13), drafted No. 9 in 1957 as a future prospect, is making the Giant handicappers look good. A 9.6-second sprinter and champion hurdler at Texas Western, he has speed to burn and uses it to advantage as a ball-carrier, pass-receiver and kick-returner. Superstitious in reverse, he wears No. 13 by request.

Len Mac Ofer

Ken MacAfee (80), signed as a free agent while serving in the Marine Corps, joined the Giants in 1954 and promptly nailed down a job as an offensive end. One of the fastest runners on the squad, the rangy Alabaman not only is a fine deep receiver but also does a solid job of blocking. Through 1957 he had caught 65 passes for 1021 yards and 15 TDs.

Next, the Browns!

MILT PLUM

Jim Lee Howell's lad accomplished one of the crowning upsets of Giant history by knocking off the presumably invincible Browns, 21-17, in Cleveland a few weeks back. It was the first defeat of the season for the Browns and put them into a slight state of shock.

The shock has disappeared but the bitter feeling of chagrin remains and it is no exaggeration to say that the Browns will come here for the return match in a vengeful mood.

With jolting Jimmy Brown, bolting Bobby Mitchell, menacing Milt Plum, puissant Preston Carpenter and larruping Lou Groza in their cast, a vengeful Brown team is rather terrifying to contemplate.

BOB MITCHELL

However, this Giant team is not one to back off from a challenge. In fact, it seems to thrive on challenges, when they come from a respected source.

So if the Browns are vengeful, you can be assured that the Giants will be equally determined to keep them that way.

Without belaboring the point any further, what better recipe is there for tasty football fare? See you Dec. 14.

Football Giants - 1959 Season Subscription

IN late February or March the Giants 1959 Season Ticket Brochure will be available for mailing. If you wish to receive one, just fill in and mail the blank appearing on this page.

(Please note that this Brochure is for the use of new applicants. If you are presently a season subscriber your reservation for the same seats you had this year is automatically renewed and no action on your part is required.)

The advantages of season subscription are many. You reserve for yourself the same seats for every regular season or post season game the Giants play in the Stadium. The location is the closest you can possibly get to your own preference allowing, of course, for similar tastes of prior subscribers. You solve all your ticket problems at once and can avoid the last minute rushes and the pressures of trying to get "anything at all" when the big games develop. For business purposes or your own personal pleasure there is no greater buy in entertainment.

While you are here today we suggest that you take a look around. If you want upper or mezzanine reserved seats on the Giants side consider sections 34 or 14. There are vacancies there. Yardage on the Giants side? Yes in the lower stand there are some fine vacancies in both box and reserved seats as there are in the lower stand across the field in sections 29 or 31.

For you who must have the upper or mezzanine we refer you to sections such as 25, 23, 21, or 19 for reserved seats. For upper or mezzanine boxes we recommend the sections which look directly up the field from the end zone as the best available locations.

Our brochure will give complete season subscription information. But the first step is to fill out and mail the accompanying blank. We will be very happy to send you the brochure when it comes off the presses later this winter.

Jottings on the Giants

W IN, lose or draw today, Coach Jim Lee Howell, his staff and all the Giants will be honored tonight at the annual dinner of the Section Five Club at the Hotel Concourse Plaza. For Senator Howell, it will be a reunion. A lot of his old Giant teammates of the 1936-40 era will be on hand—among them Tuffy Leemans, Hank Soar, Leland Shaffer, Johnny Gildea and Stan Galazin. . . . It's not too late to join this notable party. Just show up—with money—and you'll be welcome.

The Bergenfield High School Band of Bergenfield, N. J., directed by Bernard Baggs, will entertain between the halves of today's game. This talented marching and musical group, like the others who have been at the Stadium this season, puts on a rousing show. Please let these youngsters know you appreciate their efforts on your behalf

This is Alex Webster's "Day." More than 500 East Brunswick, N. J., friends and neighbors of the great Giant halfback will pay tribute to him. It's a motion that all Giant fans warmly second. Alex has provided so many fine days of performance for the Giants that it's about time the debt was repaid.... Another "day" is coming up two weeks hence, when the Giants meet the Browns. This one is for Em Tunnell, another worthy recipient of tribute from the stands. At room 228, 60 East 42nd

al Barry

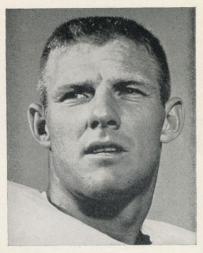

Al Barry (68), obtained from the Packers in a pre-season trade, has done a splendid job for the Giants at guard, a position dogged by injuries this year. This is the 235-pound USC graduate's third pro season. He was drafted by Green Bay in '53 but stayed an extra year in college and put in a service hitch before joining them.

Giant Album

Ray Wietecha

Ray Wietecha (55), who played half a dozen positions well for the Giants as a rookie in 1953, was installed as offensive center the following year and has since been a fixture there ever since. The Giants rate him as the best pivotman in the NFL. At Northwestern, Ray also was an outstanding baseball player.

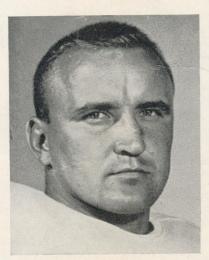

Billy Lott

Billy Lott (22). This fleet, nifty 195-pound halfback, a No. 6 choice in last winter's draft, has been showing rare rookie poise on both offense and defense. Hailing from Ole Miss doesn't hurt Billy's chances. That's the school that started Charley Conerly, Jim Patton and the various Pooles on the road to Giant glory.

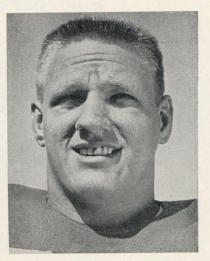

El Hugho

Ed Hughes (48), who played his college football for the U. of Tulsa, joined the Giants in 1956 after having put in a couple of seasons with the Los Angeles Rams. Fast afoot and a sure tackler who has the knack of being in the right place at the right time, he has been a valuable addition to the defensive secondary.

Bob Mischak

Bob Mischak (62), a crack end for Army a few years back, has bobbed up as an offensive guard with the Giants and looks like a good one. A first-year pro but technically not a rookie since he trained briefly with the Browns in 1957 after finishing his service hitch. Has good speed and, at 230 pounds, the power to make his blocks stick.

Jem Kateavage

At Dayton University, Jim Katcavage (75) did not have much chance to capture the spotlight. But Giant scouts had him tabbed as a great prospect. A No. 4 draft choice in 1956, he was a key rushliner on the championship team of that year. A rugged 230-pounder who likes to mix it, he does a capable job anywhere up front, on defense or offense.

including you!

For the man who (as the Yuletide ads say) has EVERYTHING, we have invented a new Something. It is the Martini Master (with easy-to-remove label). And notice how it glows invitingly with 94 proof Seagram's Golden Gin. Buy it yourself ... or hint broadly. And don't forget your friends! The rewards, obviously are double. Not only do you get the famous improved gin that revitalized the martini, but you can stir as you never stirred before: Stir in a handsome antiqued glass Martini Master with screw-on strainer top! Stir with the pride of re-creating the martini from scratch into smooth, from damp into dry, from prose into poetry! The Martini Master, to the chagrin of our company treasurer, is available to you at no extra cost. As a result, however, it is emphatically in limited supply.

Now 94 proof at no increase in price

Looking Over the Eagles

NORM VAN BROCKLIN

DON'T be deceived by the Eagles' unimpressive won-lost record. Look at the scores of their games (page 32). They tell the truer story which, in a nutshell, is that this is a sharply improved Philadelphia team that has put up a real battle in just about every game.

This is strictly for your benefit. The Giants don't need any briefing on the Eagles. They found out, painfully, in Philadelphia on October 5, how much more formidable than last year the 1958 Eagles are. The Giants lost that game, 27-24, after carrying a 24-20 lead into the last quarter.

Two big factors in the rehabilitation of a team that had accomplished little in the three previous seasons were the appointment of Lawrence T. (Buck) Shaw as coach and the acquisition of Norm Van Brocklin from the Los Angeles Rams.

The silver-haired Shaw, a star tackle at Notre Dame under Knute Rockne, is one of football's most respected coaches. During his distinguished 34-year career, Buck served at North Carolina State, Nevada, Santa Clara, California and the Air Force Academy, in the college ranks.

He's also an old hand at pro football. He was the original coach of the San Francisco Forty-Niners and made them a power to be feared in the defunct All-America Conference and the National League through 1954. Then he accepted the assignment of getting the Air Force Academy off the ground in football.

That mission accomplished, with outstanding success, Shaw was happy to return to pro football for another building job, with the Eagles.

It didn't take Buck long to discover that, more than anything else, the Eagles needed stronger wings. A chance to get Van Brocklin presented itself and Shaw grabbed him, for no National League passer has a stronger arm than the colorful Dutchman, a three-time winner of and perpetual contender for the league passing title.

With Van Brocklin at quarterback, the Eagles have one of the more potent attacks of the procircuit. He's blessed with fine receivers in Bobby Walston and Maryland's Dick Bielski, at the ends, and Pete Retzlaff and Tommy McDonald in the flanking halfback position.

BOB PELLEGRINI

BUCK SHAW

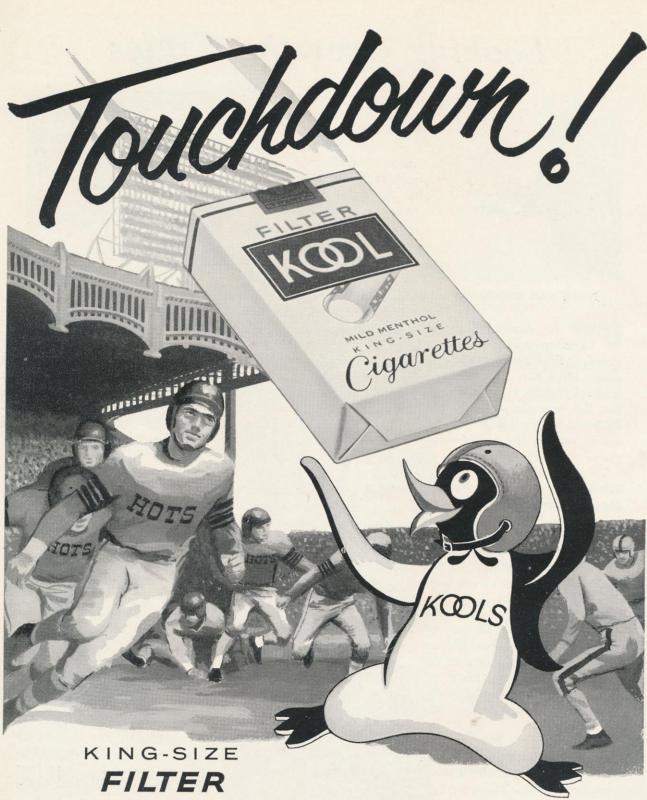

Bill Barnes and Clarence Peaks, two of the league's best rookie backs in 1957, are good pass-catchers, too, and, unlike last year, when they pretty much had to go it alone, they have strong running support. Billy Wells, who was with Pittsburgh last year and Washington before that, and Walt Kowalczyk, a 1957 All-America at Michigan State, have stepped up the voltage of Philadelphia's ground game considerably.

One of pro football's noblest old pros heads a crisp-blocking offensive line that gives these speedy backs a chance to show their stuff. That's Chuck Bednarik, who, after years of devastating play as a linebacker, is revelling in the new role of offensive center.

The once-mighty Philadelphia defense has developed some chinks that Shaw has not yet had a chance to fill satisfactorily. As the record shows, the Eagles can be scored on.

However, no one is going to trample on such rugged operatives as Tom (Great) Scott and Jesse Richardson, who date back to the era when getting the Eagles to yield a touchdown was like pulling teeth. Bob Pellegrini, a more recent recruit, is cut from the same stripe.

Make no mistake about it, this is a good Philadelphia team!

Giants vs. Eagles

SERIES RECORD

	W.	L.	T.	Pts.	Opp. Pts.
Giants	 31	17	1	909	724

The Grants have met the Philadelphia Eagles more frequently over the years than any other National Football League rival. This will be the fiftieth game between the teams, which have met twice each year since 1933 (except in the war year of 1943).

While the series record shows the Giants far in front, the won-lost-tied tally tells only part of the story of the heated rivalry between these old foes.

More significant of the lively give-and-take that has marked the series is the average score of the forty-nine preceding games. That works out to 18.2 points to 14.5 points, in favor of the Giants, a difference of only 3.7 points per game.

The series has run in cycles. From 1933 through 1942, as the NFL's dominant Eastern power, the Giants won 17 games and lost only three. From 1944 through 1949, when Greasy Neale beat the rest of the league to the punch in the general postwar rebuilding effort, the Eagles won nine and tied one of 12 games with the Giants.

From 1950 through 1957, a period which saw the Giants rise from the bottom to the top of the pro heap, the New Yorkers won 12 of 16.

Philadelphia, now showing signs of moving upward after a long period of innocuous desuetude, as the pundits say, drew first blood this year. Let's see what happens today.

Giant Blackboard: Swing Pass

THE average fan thinks of the pass as a "go for broke" type of play. Often it is. On the other hand, particularly in pro football, where passing skills have been developed to a high degree, the pass is an integral part of ball-control. It also frequently is used to discourage defensive overloading that wreaks havoc with normal play patterns.

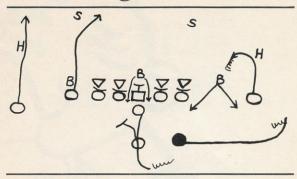

As an example of what might be termed a remedial pass, today's blackboard session with Vin Lombardi, the Giant offensive coach, deals with a play that has worked well for the Giants over the years. Since this is his "day," we have designated Alex Webster as the prime receiver.

The play is simple enough. Charley Conerly or Don Heinrich, whichever is at quarterback, drops straight back on taking the snap. After faking to Mel Triplett or Phil King, whichever is at fullback, the Giant quarterback quickly flips the ball to Webster, who has swung out into the right flat.

More subtle than it appears, this swing pass is designed particularly to cope with a pinching, jamming defense featuring obstreperous darts into the Giant backfield by the line-backers.

If the line-backers crash, the Giant quarterback has a clear shot at Webster without having to worry too much about an interception, which is always a matter of concern on a flat pass. Alex, in turn, has a chance to make some real yardage, because the defensive left halfback, occupied covering the flanked Giant right end, can't come up immediately.

In a reverse situation, when the Giant quarterback finds the left side line-backer sliding out into the flat to protect that passing zone, the ball can be thrown to the button-hooking end, who, being in front of the defensive left halfback and safety with no defender between him and the passer, should be free for at least a short gain.

Passes of this type don't often produce longyardage touchdown plays. They do play an important part in ball-control. How? First, by keeping the Giants moving forward. Second, by making the line-backers think twice about being too ven-

o. Callinoto, Doute

Rare is the whiskey of such character and savor that it unfailingly offers complete and perfect pleasure. And if this triumph won't quite change the stars in their courses or shade a gold moon blue, at least it can win more advocates than any other whiskey in the world's history. It can . . . and did. Its name is 7 Crown.
